EMPLOYMENT: In addition to my teaching duties, I have had the following employment:

September 1996 to present      Department of Sociology. University of Pittsburgh.
Position: Undergraduate Advisor.
Responsibilities: Advising all undergraduate Sociology majors. Coordinating with the CAS Advising Office to assure that the CAS advisees interested in Sociology receive appropriate information about the structure of the Sociology curriculum. Coordinating the internship program for Sociology majors and other students interested in Sociology. This includes identifying new internship opportunities, institutionalizing existing internship arrangements, and assisting students in matching their interests with available opportunities.

May 1988 to June 1992      College of Arts and Sciences Advising Center.
University of Pittsburgh.
Position: CAS Advisor.
Responsibilities: Working primarily with Freshmen and Sophomores, CAS advisors help students select appropriate courses, and make sure they are properly registered. More importantly, in my capacity as advisor, I encouraged students to explore the full dimensions of a liberal arts education, so that they might achieve a rewarding and well-rounded educational experience. Advisors also act as a source of information and assistance for students with a wide variety of questions and problems. My case load was approximately 150 students. I was required to have a detailed knowledge of all of the academic programs offered by the University of Pittsburgh.
